

A stroke is a “brain attack”. It can happen to anyone at any time. It occurs when blood flow to an area of the brain is cut off for a period of time. When this happens, brain cells do not receive oxygen and begin to die. When brain cells die during a stroke, abilities controlled by that area of the brain such as memory and muscle control are lost.

How a person is affected by a stroke depends on where the stroke occurs in the brain and how much of the brain is damaged. For example, someone who had a small stroke may only have minor problems such as temporary weakness of an arm or leg. People who suffer a larger stroke may be permanently paralyzed on one side of their body or lose the ability to speak. Some people recover completely from stroke, but more than 2/3 of survivors will have some type of disability.

Common problems following a stroke include:

- Pain
- Poor balance
- Muscle weakness
- Tight, stiff muscles
- Paralysis
- Bladder and bowel control issues
- Swallowing problems
- Cognitive problems
- Communication problems
- Depression
